

DELIRIUM PART ONE: DEATH (The Breakdown)

Written by Michelle Handelman

Spoken by Lydia Lunch

MONOLOGUE

Make space to think about that which has died
Trust the witch

Euphoria
Sleep
Death
Control

We're in the presence of absence

Make space to think about that which has died
Inside a constant state of desire

We have lost the option of silence
Because the war is never over
Because the sound is a distraction

In this country, violence and hatred
Are a particular form of intimacy
A fetish

Inside a constant state of desire

Maybe violence is a form of rebirth
And blood is just memory without language

I open myself to my absence
I crave submergence, not release

I am singing in the dark
Singing without a body
Singing from an erased place in the universe
Singing
Singing
Singing
The cacophony of grief
